Humming Trees

When the world feels heavy and sleep won't come,
I take a little trip to where the pine trees hum.
I wander through the forest, feeling oh-so-free,
Listening to the breezy whispers dancing in the leaves.

I toss my worries like fallen pinecones,
Finding joy in wild things that roam on their own.
In the cozy calm of the woods, I play,
Where life is simple, bright, and full of sway.

In nature's embrace, I find pure delight,
A reminder that life's a beautiful flight,
With laughter in the air and sunshine so bright,
It's easy to feel light-hearted and right!
